FENWICK PAPERS

Carrie E. Miller

FENWICK PAPERS

FOREWORD

This book was dedicated to a wee, small man
In '37 by members of his own large clan
Of Scotchmen who sought to build and create
The best year book ever in any state.
They squeezed each penny 'til it cried,
And the dollar bills curled up and died,
But they loved this man with all their heart,
And vowed that from him they'd never part,
Cause they'd had him with them in earlier days,
And they couldn't as Seniors escape his gaze.
He made sure there wouldn't be spent
On this book one single, extra cent—
Then, so he could guide them to a rich old age,
They put him on the very first page
Of their 1937 Annual.

I walk through these halls as a senior for the last time.

And as I slowly go, there flashes through my mind

Thoughts that are tragic, amusing, human, and very dear,

Jumbled pictures of the glorious days spent here.

The sound of lockers being closed, the idle chatter

That fell on my ears like the ceaseless patter

Of raindrops. The familiar stage upon which we'd gaze

With rapt trepidation at miraculous plays.

The sight of a boy, a book under his arm,

Waiting for a girl upon whom to turn his charm;

The long hall through which we had to pass,

For seemingly endless days, from class to class.

The days seemed long then, but what we wouldn't give

Now, if we had the chance again to relive

That brief, hectic span in our life that gave

Us the foundation upon which is laid

The structure of the new life we now begin,

And in which we hope like anyone, to win

Recognition for ourselves and Salem High,—

Honor due a memory that can never die!

Song of the Class of 1937

Tune: "Sympathy", from "The Firefly" by Rudolf Friml
Words: DORIS FOX

Whose doors were opened so cheerfully?
Salem! mm, mm, High! mm, mm!
We crossed the threshold so timidly
Into mm, mm, Salem! mm, mm,
Our apprehensions soon grew dim;
We started out to work, to win.
Now eve has come and our work's complete.
Salem! mm, mm! High! mm, mm.
We did our best and our tasks did meet
Salem! mm, mm! High! mm, mm.
Happiest moments of youth's swift hours,
You're in our hearts through sun and showers.

CHORUS

In youth we came to thee
To spend four years together;
Now we're parting today,
Parting with memories happy and gay;
And what e're life may bring,
With love and pride, this praise we'll
Sing to dear alma mater, Salem High.

Nine Hole Golf Course

Arriving in Salem High somewhat frightened and new to the game, we were shown around the links. With drivers in hand and Miss Harris as caddie, we teed off and started across the green to the first hole, the Freshman reception, where we were entertained by the Sophomores in true Hallowe'en fashion.

Continuing, we found the next hole longer and harder, with bunkers in the form of examinations, but after much baffing and scuffing, we neared the second hole as Sophomores and sank the ball, the reception to the class of 1938. Now we attempted to entertain them as we had been entertained the year before.

Our game was about half over as we began for the fifth hole. We were one step behind the goal. During the absence of our beloved Seniors, who were enjoying themselves at Washington, the class of 1937 held a Junior Day event. The Juniors witnessed the play "Showboat", starring the three comedians Wayne Sheppard, Geraldine Mifflin, and William Tomlinson. Their humourous jokes and acting afforded a considerable amount of entertainment. Before completing the play, two strokes followed. The first was an unfortunate one. Here our class adviser for 1937, Miss Harris, took a permanent leave of absence from Salem High. But we were again displaying our excellent golf as our new class adviser, Miss Muller, gladly accepted the duties and responsibility of this work. Miss Muller has shown much interest and has most faithfully helped us achieve our final score.

The sixth hole was the annual Junior play by Cap and Bells. With the last stroke, we gave the Seniors a grand farewell in the form of a prom.

Seniors ourselves now, we strutted out on the links to resume the game. No foozling now, no missing the globe, and we sank the ball into that long-awaited hole, the Washington trip, the one occasion when Seniors can act as senseless as possible and not be criticised. We went through many public buildings, of course, but that wasn't what we went for. We went to have a good time, and every one did.

One day in September
I'll never forget
We left on our trip
Education to get
Down in Virginia
To Washington's home
In all the rain
O'er that huge place we roamed
On that spacious lawn
Our pictures were taken
We looked quite forlorn
And quite forsaken
Then to the library
With the teachers we went
In those beautiful rooms
One hour we spent
We piled in the buses
Back to the hotel
To dress for the dance
We raced pell-mell
And then for the wedding
Of Thelma and Bill
When asked they repeated
I will, I will
To the bureau of printing
And engraving we went
Then we walked over
To the monument
From a tiny window
Way up in the sky
We saw Mr. Shoemaker
Who looked like a fly
To the building of science
We Seniors did go
To push all the buttons
And make things go
To the Pan-American Union
And the D.A.R.
The great Cathedral
On a hill so far
At the President's home
The stately White House
We stared wide-eyed
Quiet as a mouse
To the "Great Ziegfeld"
The show was a wow
The stars Myrna Loy
And William Powell
Henry Budowsky
In an awful fix
His pork chop and cigar
Did not mix
He appeared in the doorway
At half past eight
Who? Mr. Shoemaker
One hour late
Out to the buses
And a Southern belle
For this dizzy dame
Bill Tomlinson fell
To the Capitol Building
With a great big dome
We visited this
Then we left for home

At Annapolis
The middies as cold as frost
Kugler and Vengenock
Both were lost
To the Lord Baltimore
For chicken and fish
Deacon Lodge
Left an empty dish
Then on to Elkton
The marrying town

A few got up
But they soon sat down
At eight o'clock
Back to S. H. S.
We fell into bed
For a good night's rest
And so ends the tale
Of the Seniors about town
This story related by
Mildred Browne

After several hazards and sand traps (examinations to you) and quite a few strokes, we came to the seventh hole, the annual Senior play,— the best ever in our opinion, but undoubtedly it was very good and very much enjoyed, showing real work on the part of the cast and staff. We would give orchids to Cap and Bells, but they are too expensive.

Nearing the eighth and ninth holes, we weren't so sure of ourselves. As we drove into bunkers, in the form of examinations, there was much schlaffing and scruffing, but we came through under par and made the final stroke to the eighth hole, the Prom, our last social event. Dressed in our finest, we danced, or tried to.

Then, with one short stroke, we reached the final hole, graduation. The game was over, all too short a one for some. Many were willing to continue the game on different links, while others went off in search of a better game.

Last Will and Testament

We, the (honorable) members of the Senior Class of Salem High, being of sound mind and memory (consult our faculty), make and publish our last will and testament as follows:—

Dorothy Sheppard bequeaths to Caroline Allen her petite, fairy-like form; Henry Budowsky's good looks go to Eugene Taylor; and Minnie Halpern's dancing feet to Mary Deninsky. To Virginia Galloway is willed Audri Reed's shapely legs and to Christine Morris, Mary Fogg's sophistication. To Leon Grablow is given Wayne Sheppard's gift of bashfulness; to Morris Counsellor, Allen Glaspey's immaculate appearance; to Ruth Hurley, Pauline Smith's shyness; and to Dot Nelson, Marguerite Sutton's stream-line figure.

Our class poet, Rita Scott, bequeaths her disillusioned attitude to Lib Hilyard; Alan Skinner, his excuses to Earl Bowers; Evelyn Harvey, her poise to Doris Green; and Fred Burkhardt, his athletic ability to Fountain Hogate. Thelma Archer bestows upon Margaret Dixon her quite noticeable gift of rhythm and warns her not to get St. Vitus' dance.

Donald Ridgway endows Allen Whitaker with his childish ways; to Alice Coleman goes Elizabeth Garrison's intelligence; and to Doris Norton, Jack Carpenter's rosy cheeks.

That our old Alma Mater may not be without romance, Arthur Hall wills to George Pappas his romantic ways. The brawn of James Wood is bequeathed to Joe Hall, in the hope that it will improve his athletics. Bill Plasket bestows his easy-going manner upon John Ridgway. Frank Bodofsky leaves to Sidney Dantinne his good manners; Bill Wilson gives his daintiness to Glendon Finlaw; Ella Sullivan, her gracefulness to Lydia Galloway; and Norman Miller, his executive ability to Edward Brooks.

Peggy Smith imparts to Ellen Moore her pleasant imagination; Helen Eitzel's indifference goes to Jean Howell. To Victor Robinson, Isadore Levitsky leaves his sport manner; Marie Hewitt, her teasing ways to Gladys Elwell. As a Don Juan, Norman Patrick becomes Harry Wood's successor. Dot Zane's and Rinky Slavin's flirty ways are bequeathed to Johanna Seyforth. Emma Miller's dark eyes will be passed to Carrie Miller. To Cecilia Hilyard, Francis Stout gives her ardent admirers. Leo Vengenock leaves his most valued possession (privately printed), "How to Make Love Successfully", to a somewhat disillusioned gallant, Harry G. Fry.

To the Junior Class in general we give a set of well-worn books.

The English class leaves to Gene Bradford that stirring tale of American Romance, "To Have and to Hold."

To Mr. Shoemaker we leave the whole school system, and increased leisure time.

Lastly: We hereby constitute and appoint Mildred A. Purnell and Jesse Evans Muller executive of this our last will and testament.

It witness whereof we have hereto set our hands and seals this sixteenth day of June, A. D. 1937.

President Wayne Sheppard

Signed, acknowledged, and declared by said Senior Class for their last will and testament, in the presence of us (both being present at the same time) who at their request in their presence and in the presence of each other have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses.

NEW COLONIA

Sands of Time

WHEN we as Seniors graduated in 1937, we promised that in 1947 we would meet at a certain place without fail. The place we chose was the French Casino in New York City.

With a mixed feeling of curiosity and apprehension, I turned my footsteps toward the Casino, where I beheld a swarm of clamoring women eagerly watching Ralph Clement, the world's most eligible bachelor, descend from his town car and enter the establishment. I entered the Casino to be greeted by the owner, smiling, affable Clement Powell. The place was cleverly decorated for our reunion in gay Scottish plaids, to remind us of our final days at Salem High School.

I made a round of the tables, greeting everyone. At one table, looking very smart and oh! so polished and moderne, sat Bea Croft, Gladys Carll, and Minnie Halpern. Their escorts were that cold, cold man Alan Skinner, the wrestler; Fred Burkhardt, the well-known florist; and Henry Budowsky, that clever and promising bologna salesman. In a secluded corner sat Pearl Mansfield of motion picture fame, whispering sweet nothings into the ear of that intrepid adventurer and explorer, Wayne Sheppard. At this time, I was interrupted by the approach of a swaggering, insolent beauty, none other than L'Ella Sullivane, a new edition of Mae West. "Hyah, kids," she drawled, winking at Mr. Ballinger, her forgotten man.

There was a blare of music as the spotlight swung onto the floor. There were Rita Scott and her sophisticates, playing a smooth arrangement of Auld Lang Syne.

Out onto the floor in the circle of the light stepped a gay figure, Marvin Pearl, the genial master of ceremonies. After a few words of welcome, he began the floor show, with Audri and Dot tapping to the Barnyard Trot. Their ovation seemed great until Irene Slavin launched into her glorified fan-dance. This appealed very strongly to two stout, business men, Warren Ray and Wayne Benner, who were immediately silenced by cold glances from their wives, the socialite, Frances Bacon and the pocket Venus, Emma Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Vengenock, née Virginia Russell, were oblivious of the floor show, gazing raptly into each other's eyes, while Billy Plasket, watched such adoration with frustration on his face. Marian Waddington warbled a torch song, followed by a chorus of high-stepping girls, Amelia Crist, Theresa Whitesell, Julia Kirk, Mabel Goslin, Edna Rankin, and Wilburta Mills. The show closed for the moment with Anne Miller in a lovely toe-dance called "Goddess of Spring." Roger Ansink, following his predestined career as a traveling salesman, and I circled the floor. We saw Helen Eitzel, tennis champ, wind-burned and brown, dining with the king of finance, Bill Tomlinson. The genius of psychiatry, Jack Carpenter, was chatting amiably with Marie Hewitt, the Golden Girl with Silver Skates, while Dorothy Zane, the Gay Divorcee, watched him with eyes that had looked thus on six husbands. Socially minded Thelma Archer greeted Peggie Smith, a designer in an ultra-smart Fifth Avenue shop.

At another table, sat Mary Charles Figestahler, Margaret Balamontis, and Marian Haskett with their escorts of the evening, Van Sheppard, Billy Kugler, and Julius Saltzburg. Margaret had a stellar role in a Broadway show. Mary Charles and Marian owned a shop, "creating gowns for the beautiful."

Pete Egan was a typical man-about-town. But Julius? Oh! that golden voice that drove women mad had finally been enthroned in the Metropolitan. Arthur Hall, the screen's lover, was sitting with his eyes glued upon Pauline Smith, smiling at the ever-attentive foreign diplomat, Glendon Mitchell.

Alberta Myers had married well. Her name was Mrs. Joseph Russell. Eddie List and Mary Fogg were dancing with stardust in their eyes. Progressive Harry Wood, held in tow a person we recognized as Billy Wilson. Harry tried to tell us it was an educated goon from the African wilds. Suave and smooth, Allen Glaspey held in his arms that charming writer of prize-winning novels, Ruby Sparks. Frank Allen and Hannah Klessel had finished their high school romance with marriage.

Walter Ammerman sat at a table, dreaming. Elizabeth Breslin speculatively surveyed a lovely box of tempting bon-bons. Frank Bodofsky, chemical genius, was basking in the sunshine of Midge Brown's smile. Midge was the charming stooge on Wit of Radio, Louis Dwyer's program. Jack Dantinne and Carlton Dunn were the Casino's bouncers.

As I had another engagement, I rambled outside after bidding many cheerful adieux. On closer inspection the hat check girl turned out to be Barbara Foster.

As I reached the outside entrance, I saw an attractive girl with a travelworn bag, Florence Farenkopf returning from an extensive, around-the-world hitch-hiking jaunt.

Needing air, I walked down the avenue, turning over the night's events in my mind. There I saw a sign that read as follows: "Charles Hobbs—Your Future Told in Dreams." Another sign in black and silver, stated that you could learn to dance in three lessons with Betty Kiger as the teacher.

Tired and exhausted, I reached my hotel, to be greeted by a stack of telegrams from former schoolmates who had found my address and sent in their regrets. The first was from Burchell George, a prosperous farmer in the West. He couldn't leave, as it was near the time for the rains to come. Ruth Hogate could not come as she had to broadcast. Jessie Harris had an important business engagement that could not be broken. Edith Zane was redecorating her beauty salon and did not have the time. Melvin Simmerman was busy getting ready a new stand for his circus show.

I heard quite a commotion outside the hotel. Running to the window I saw Ellan Levitsky on a soap-box, speaking quite volubly. The applause was terrific, that is, from her only spectator, Dot Levitsky. There was a long telegram from the Cotton Club, where other members of our class had gone to be in a revue headed by Prudence Brown and Nevelin Johnson, with Floyd Burrell's Swingsters furnishing the music. They sent best wishes. Gertrude Bartlett was teaching at Northwestern and could not get off.

I received a long special delivery letter from Luther Hadley, containing news about our home-bodies. Lewis Firth, the present Mayor of Salem, had Van Sheppard as his very able right hand man. James and Harry Wood were photographers for all Salem Annuals. Sarah Butcher owned the French Shop. Evelyn Harvey and Florence Grieves were her two willing helpers. Edgar Newton had made some remarkable discovery for DuPont's and been liberally rewarded.

Quite a few of our class saw the need to replace the faculty of years ago. Marietta Corson juggled the acids in the chemistry lab. Harry Brumbaugh took Mr. Fry's position as history teacher. Ruth Waddington and Marian Woodward gave an interesting course entitled "Boy Meets Girl." Mildred Pickers, always interested in problems of democracy, saw fit to remove our lovely Miss Durr and holds the position herself. James Smith lives in seclusion, having retained fame as a literary genius. Libby McCarthy is a retired all-around Olympic Star with an aversion to publicity. Doug Marts still haunts the Y's Pool table. Geraldine Mifflin gave up independence to marry and raise chickens on a farm on the Bridgeton Road. Sherwood Lloyd still gives the Palace Theatre patrons hill-billy versions of popular tunes. Kenneth Miller plays the role of a musical comedian.

Edwin Scull and Gladys Smith tripped the light fantastic on the good old Fenwick screen. Eva Meltzer owned a shoe store on Broadway. Izzy Levitsky played in Cack-Cack Wilson's Salem Orchestra. Francis Dolbow, in a frenzied moment, tore down Erhardt's and gained lasting immortality. Pauline Kubicki set her station in life as remaining an old maid. Julius Kollar was Salem's best policeman, and Felix Smuz, his most important guest. Last but not least, Marguerite Sutton was the pining beauty waiting for her hero.

As the letter closed, I threw myself on my bed, tired in body but refreshed in mind, glad to know that the whereabouts of our class of '37 would remain forever in the Sands of Time.

Hall of Fame

In this class of '37 we have a hall of fame,
Where every student with some outstanding trait
May have engraved in flaming letters his name,
Showing exactly how much with us he or she does rate.
First, we have Virginia Russell and Leo,
1937 versions of Marc Anthony and Cleo.
Then, for examples of the athletes of Troy,
We have Marguerite, the girl, and Glaspey, the boy.
Every class must have, of course, wit and humor;
So, Helen and Billy Wilson, we should have thought of this sooner.
Also remember, what's a class unless it has a goof?
Freddy and Pearl are our definite proof.
Rita and Alan make a good pair,—
Brains are in heaven, noses in the air.
As for those who are clothed the best,—
Why Gladys Smith and Leo are the best-dressed.
In every class there are those who are shy,—
Pauline and Wayne: you guess the reason why.
Marvin and Audri talk more than any,
While Eddie and Mary receive the vote of many
For being a modern Romeo and Juliet.
Peggie Smith and Kugler defy the hands of Fate,
By always arriving at any function late.
While Marie and Joe Russell plus an appetite
Would eat anything and everything in sight.
A pair that causes many rapturous sighs
Are Mary Charles and charming Clement,
A poised self shone where'er they went.
The biggest flirts are Wayne Benner and Irene;
Their eyes wink perpetually at every one seen.
The best salesmen we found out were
Henry Budowsky and personable Thelma Archer;
As for those who trip on the light fantastic toe,
Dot Sheppard and Billy are the best we know.
Marian Woodward and Jack Carpenter are the brightest,
While Van Sheppard and Bea Croft are the flightiest.
I think we've covered this list fairly well.
And now, don't you think it would be swell,
If we include the whole class in the next lines?
We say, as shivers run up our spines,
That, all in all, this has been a great class
From the very first year of school to the last,
And if in this hall you don't find your name,
You'll probably see it later in a greater hall of fame,
One in which the whole world competes,
And the one that has the stuff is the one that beats.

Since 1925 Salem High School has been governed by a Student Self Government Association. During these last twelve years it has been necessary to make many amendments and add to the regulations governing our association.

Perhaps the most important subject discussed this year was the point system, which most schools have adopted and found very effective. Suggestions were made for the development of school spirit and for the encouragement of better manners in the halls, cafeteria, and classrooms.

For the first time the entire council went to the State Teachers' College at Trenton to attend a Student Self Government meeting. Two members of our council, Virginia Russell and James Bivins, gave talks before the assemblies. Jack Wright acted as chairman at one of these gatherings. Various other members took notes and reported their findings at a special assembly.

A new safety patrol was organized to aid traffic before and after school sessions at Star Corner. This squad has done a very efficient job.

To aid conditions in the cafeteria at noon time, a service patrol was organized.

The study hall problem was discussed and much done to improve this condition, but due to a lack of rooms the study halls are over crowded, making the problem a serious one.

Future Farmers

President	Carlton Dunn	Vice-President	David Elwell
Secretary	James Bivins	Adviser	William Evans

The Future Farmers of America is an organization designed to create a better knowledge of country life and to promote greater interest in agriculture in those students of public schools planning to choose farming as a vocation.

During the first semester the activities of the club included a trip to the county fair at Reading and another to the State F. F. A. meeting and judging contest. Competitive sports in wrestling and boxing were held. At the close of the semester, forty F. F. A. members traveled to the State Fair at Harrisburg.

The club's activities during the second semester included tryouts for the F. F. A. play, participation in a Hilly Billy Orchestra, spring judging contest for poultry and dairy products, and a Father and Son Banquet on parents' night.

At the close of the school term, twenty-five F. F. A. members spent the week-end at Highpoint Camp, New Jersey.

Cap and Bells

President	Mary Charles Figlestahler	Treasurer	Francis Dolbow
Vice-President	James Bivins	Adviser	Marie L. Oehrle
Secretary	Mildred Castle

This year Cap and Bells continued its tradition of presenting many fine plays to the student body and the public. The Junior three-act play, December 3 and 4, was a new addition to the Cap and Bells' production program. This and the Senior three-act play were the only ones shown to the public. One of the most touching of the one-act plays given in assembly was the Senior Lincoln Day program, The Boy in Blue. This play clearly showed how family relations were torn by the Civil War. The Washington's Day feature, In Washington's Day, was given in assembly by the Junior Class. Other performances much enjoyed by the student body were Just What They Wanted, a Christmas play, Dress Reversal, a comedy play with a cast entirely of boys, and Just Before the Prom, a mystery play with a cast entirely of girls. The annual Senior play,The Eyes of Tlaloc, April 7, 8 and 9, concluded a most satisfactory and entertaining year in Cap and Bells.

Traffic Squad

Captain	Glendon Lodge	Adviser	Grace L. Whyte

The traffic squad has been constantly on the alert for any improvements which might contribute to the general running efficiency of the school. This year its efforts have been widely directed. It has improved order going to and from assembly, before school in the morning and at noon, at football games, and in the cafeteria. The new safety patrol has been incorporated within the traffic squad.

Aviation Club

President	James Wood	Secretary	Russell Willis
Vice-President	Harry Wood	Adviser	Mildred A. Purnell

The aviation club was first organized in October. In the course of the next few meetings different type planes and plans for building models were discussed. Soon some of the members were bringing their own models to the meetings for the others to see. Interest seemed to be divided between solid models and flying planes. Successful test-flying meetings were interspersed with discouraging crack-ups. Those who launched their models in midair and watched them glide, fly, or even cave-in had a great time doing so.

Biology Club

President	Allen Glaspey	Secretary	Pauline Smith
Vice-President	Fountain Hogate	Adviser	Mary W. Oakley

This is the sixth year that the Biology Club has been organized for furthering interest in nature study for both old and new members. This club meets twice a month.

At the meetings this year, the club members have enjoyed programs conducted by the students themselves, who have discussed topics of current biological interest. They are also entertained by instructive slides rented from the Trenton Museum. Outside speakers were brought in to lecture upon special branches pertaining to biology. These lectures were given by doctors, dentists, state foresters, and others interested in nature study.

Library Methods

President	Betty Kiger	Secretary	Dorothy Zane
Vice-President	Esther Sowers	Adviser	Mary W. Oakley

The duty of the librarians is to keep the library in order, help the pupils find books, and then record the books taken out.

Discussions to improve the methods in the library are frequently held. New books are registered as they come in. The club has started to file all book reports that the students of Salem High School have read in their four years. This has not yet been completed.

Although the physical make-up remained the same, the contents of The Salem Oak this year were of a different nature than in the past.

It was generally thought that as an organ of news its limitations were such as made some change practicable. As a result of this view, the staff and advisers effected a gradual transformation from a strictly news magazine to one that attempted to be of a literary nature, and still take care of the more important news items. Scores of pupils submitted articles, short stories, plays, and poems for publication, which indicated an increased interest on the part of those for whom The Oak was intended.

Director Isadore Gecenok

Salem High School's orchestra delved this year into the art of popular music. An unexpected interest was aroused in the student body during the February fifth assembly when Issy and the boys put "swing" in and all over the school.

Lack of interest and of instrumentation have handicapped the orchestra. Early morning practices had a tendency of discouraging the young musicians. An attempt was made to get more people to join in order to enlarge the size. For the first time in many years six or seven violins appeared, and with several other young players, an orchestra of about 18 or 20 pieces was gathered together.

Victor Herbert's operetta scores furnished the music for the senior play. This went over successfully, so the orchestra attempted another program in May.

Allen Glaspey's winning a place as third solo clarinetist in the All New Jersey State Symphonic Band showed that members in the orchestra might possibly get something besides the blue and white pin that is awarded at the end of the senior year.

The Glee Club meets once a week in the music room. The club has been organized to promote better singing in assembly and to work toward a good choral organization. An attempt is made to arouse interest to such an extent that music will again become an active part of the Salem High curriculum. The club already has a membership of forty.

Among the entertainments given by the club this year have been holiday programs, a special musical program with the help of the orchestra, and a musical comedy in collaboration with Cap and Bells.

French Club

President	Helen Eitzel	Secretay	Margaret Cocking

The French Club fosters French conversation through the medium of games and easy, natural frivolities.

At their various meetings the members plays games such as Lotto, Oui au Non, and 4-5-6, Pick-up-Sticks. No prizes are given, and simple refreshments are served.

In order to become a member, one must have a straight A in French. This insures a lively conversation and an enjoyable time for all.

After some delay due to curtailment of expenditures, the annual staff settled down to the task of producing a book that would recall in later years fond memories of high school days.

Through a stroke of genius, a member of the literary staff conceived the idea of having a Scotch annual. With this theme as a central idea, a fairly interesting book was built up.

The business staff aided the literary staff by manipulating the monetary affairs very skillfully, putting each cent to its special use. Finally, after almost a year of careful work taking pictures, writing articles and verses the book was finished. When it was actually on the way to the printers, the whole staff breathed a sigh of relief and gave gasps of expectation at the thought of seeing their own work on a printed page.

The combined staff wishes to acknowledge the cooperation and splendid quality of work from the following: Sarony Studio, Philadelphia, official photographers; Phototype Engraving Company, Philadelphia, engravers; and the Sunbeam Publishing Co., Salem, printers.

"The Eyes of Tlaloc"

The senior play, "The Eyes of Tlaloc," was the first of its type to be given since 1930. It had all the requisites of a mystery comedy, with several difficult characterizations ably carried out by members of the supporting cast.

The plot centered around a mural of the ancient Aztec God Tlaloc, most brilliantly executed by Helen Eitzel and Marion Haskett. The real statue, an awe-inspiring figure created by Fred Burkhardt, was said to guard a treasure of gold and jewels. Most of the action takes place in the living room of a ranch house in southern Arizona, where the various people in search of the vast wealth undergo some tense moments in their hunt for Tlaloc. After the heroine's disappearance and the trapping of the villain, the story goes on to a happy ending for everyone, with the girl, her brother, and lover reunited.

Mary Charles Figlestahler and Alan Skinner had the romantic leads. Allen Glaspey and Marguerite Sutton provided the desired bit of comedy, while Marvin Pearl, James Smith, Julius Saltzburg, and Rita Scott gave the play mystery, excitement, and intrigue. Mary Fogg, Bea Croft, Jack Dantinne, and the rest of the cast were all suited to their parts and played them well.

Miss Oehrle should be complimented, for this was a difficult play and but for her ceaseless energy would not have been so successful. Mr. Gecenok and the orchestra deserve honorable mention; their rendition of specially selected Spanish music was a treat to anyone's ears. The business staff also worked hard. The ushers were all attractively dressed and added to the general excitement that prevailed.

"The Eyes of Tlaloc" was a success, and everyone connected in any way with its production, as well as the audience, enjoyed every moment of it. It is a universal hope that Cap and Bells will produce as many successful plays in the future as it has in the past.

Summing up the games won and lost, this season wasn't very brilliant for Salem, but it may be said that Salem was greatly handicapped in every game. The veteran team was wrecked by injuries before the first game was played. Later several others were added to the list of injured. These players would have undoubtedly improved Salem's chances greatly. As it was, we won three games, tied one, and lost five.

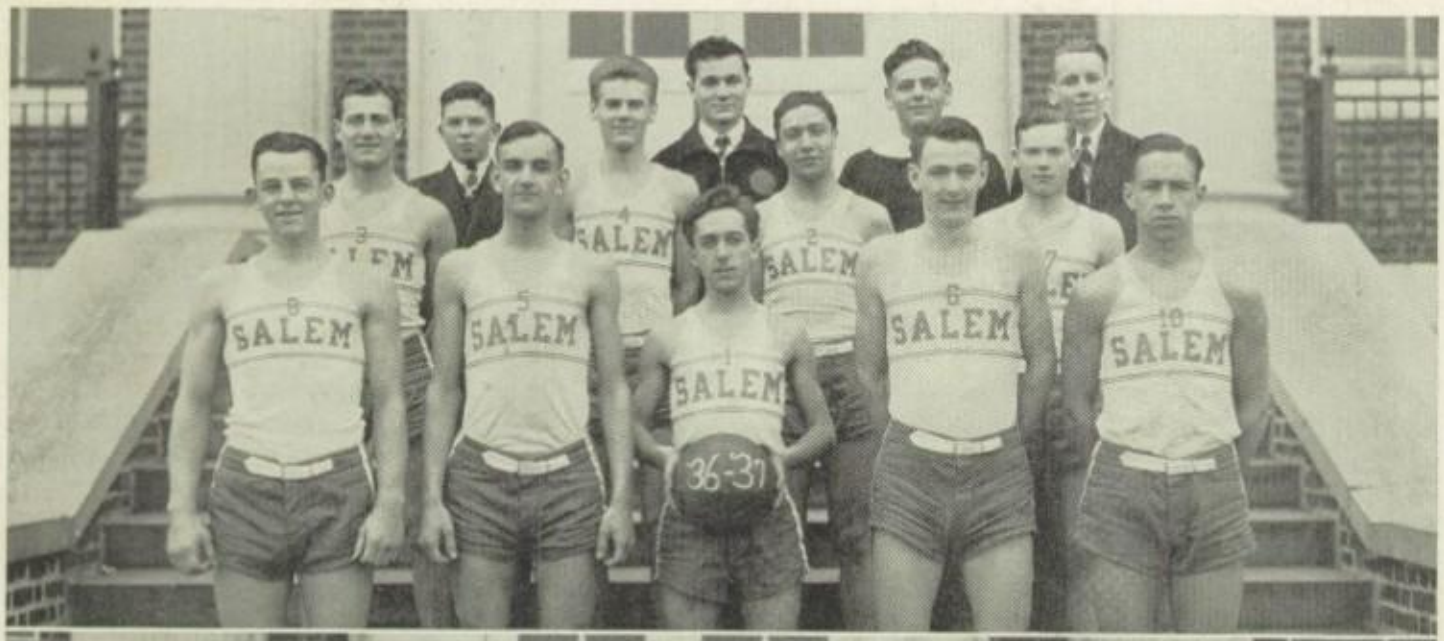
Salem High came through this year for its third consecutive hockey championship. The girls on the team determined to keep the cup permanently at Salem High. Need we say how proud we are?

In a breath-taking game they tied Pitman for the championship. In the play-off game at Bridgeton, the girls knew they had to win. Sutton, our nonchalant center scored the two goals for Salem. Our girls triumphantly brought home the coveted cup, ending the season with a blaze of glory.



Boys' Basketball

Captain	Fountain Hogate	Coach	Gene Bradford
Manager	William Plasket	Assistant	Harry Fry

In the early part of the basketball season, due to the lack of a suitable gym, the coach was compelled to cancel all games scheduled by Salem for 1937. But after the team headed by Captain Hogate presented strong arguments in favor of playing all games in the Y. M. C. A., a schedule was arranged.

During the regular season the basketeers of Salem High set up a record of five victories and six defeats in the Tri-County League. The high point of the season was the contest at Clayton, the most exciting and interesting game of the year. The boys from Salem rose to the occasion by nosing out their opponents by one point. High scorers were Hall, 81; Thomas, 71; Simmerman, 61, Sheppard, 41, and Hogate, 36.

After the regular season, Salem High traveled to Camden Convention Hall, where the South Jersey Elimination Tournament was being held, sporting an average lower than 500%. The team played its one and only game in the tournament with Clayton, who easily defeated us by a large score.

Girls' Basketball

Captain	Pauline Smith	Managers	Rebecca Billings
Coach	Eleanor Brown		Stephanie Thrasher

Salem won four out of the ten West Jersey League games. The margin of defeat was not wide, however, the largest difference being only seven points. Most of the games were lost by two to four points. Salem is happy, too, in rising from the cellar position in girls' basketball last year to fourth place in the West Jersey League, topping its two friendly rivals, Swedesboro and Woodstown.

Hurley and Sutton were outstanding defense players. The guards, Boellard and Sullivan, and the forwards, Hasket, Smith, and McCarthy, all played excellent basketball. Pauline Smith was high scorer for the season with 131 points.

FRANK HOMAN

Baseball

Manager SEYMOUR SENDROW Coach WILLIAM PULLEY

The coach has high hopes for this year's baseball team, but as it is still early in the season we have not had much opportunity to view the team's prowess. The prospects are hopeful, however, when we consider that the team held the strong Glassboro nine until the last inning, when Glassboro rallied with a score of 5-4.

Extra mention is given to Dizz Mulford, who will see some action next year through his pitching efforts. So far this season Paul Thomas has been the hardest hitter, with an average of .500. The whole team deserves credit, for everyone on the team has his work to perform.

The freshman team threatens next year's varsity, for it has some very able players, among them Buddy Harris and Walter Cox.

Mr. Pulley has started a new system of choosing a captain. He is having the boys appoint for each game a leader, either from the junior or senior class, and at the end of the year elect a steady captain.

All in all, the future looks bright and we hope the team continues as it has in the first few games.

Track

Captain JACK BALLENGER Manager JAMES PARAS
Coach GENE BRADFORD

The outlook for the track team is not as favorable as that of the baseball team, for there is hardly any veteran material, the only two left being Melvin Simmerman and Allen Glaspey. Glaspey promises to give some good performances, while John Press, a newcomer, shows decided ability.

On April 23 a delegation was sent to the Penn Relays. Salem came in seventh but did beat Woodstown, which made the defeat less bitter.

We think, with the coach, that next year we may have a team that will surprise everyone.

Cheerleading

Head Cheerleader MARY FOGG Advisers MARY A. DURR, JANE D. RITTER

The 1936-37 term was started with only one veteran cheerleader. By Thanksgiving the squad had increased to ten, two boys and eight girls. The new cheerleaders are all underclassmen, so by next year Salem High should have some snappy cheers as well as cheerleaders. The old yells have all been revised and pepped up, while many new yells have been composed.

At the Thankgiving game this year with Woodstown, the cheerleaders started a new method of making money. Programs were sold, containing the line-ups for both teams for the game, a brief history of the previous games with this team and other teams, and small write-ups about each player on both teams. Next year these programs will be offered again in the hope that enough money can be made by Thanksgiving to enable each cheerleader to have a large megaphone and a blue cape.
